

CenturyLink Donates $25,000 to Further Digital Equity Efforts

- PCs for People is a national nonprofit leading digital inclusion by providing affordable access to technology through the reuse of professionally refurbished computers
- The need for technology is vital due to current environment
- CenturyLink donated $25,000 which will immediately impact 500+ individuals and families in CenturyLink markets across the country

The COVID-19 pandemic is making the need for equitable access to technology essential across the nation. Families desperately need computers for home learning, access to telehealth, tools for newly laid off individuals, and access to the world during a time of extreme isolation. PCs for People is uniquely positioned during this unprecedented time to help low-income individuals obtain affordable technology.

“The need to digitally connect our underserved communities is more vital than ever. The incredible donation of $25,000 from CenturyLink will make an immediate impact for those needing computers during these extreme circumstances.” - Tina Stennes, PCs for People National Communications Director CenturyLink, a technology leader, is making computers even more accessible with a generous $25,000 donation to PCs for People.

“At CenturyLink, we see the important role connectivity plays in our everyday lives, from students completing their homework to employees getting their work done on time when they can’t be in the office,” said Stephanie Calhoun, CenturyLink vice president, talent management. “We are proud to provide this donation to support PCs for People’s mission to help Americans in need stay connected during the COVID-19 pandemic and beyond.”

To support current social distancing requirements, CenturyLink is also covering the cost of shipping so individuals and families can have their computers shipped directly to their home. To be eligible you must meet PCs for People’s eligibility requirements, provide documentation, and live in a market served by CenturyLink.

Computer packages include; 17” monitor, keyboard, mouse, power cords, Windows 10, WiFi adaptor, LibreOffice, antivirus software, and 1-year hardware warranty.

CenturyLink has been a long-time partner of PCs for People. The company has recycled over 300 computers and 1,000+ pounds of e-waste using PCs for People’s secure IT Asset Disposition and recycling services.
