

Lumen and Cisco expand their partnership to help businesses embrace the future of work with advanced communication and collaboration solutions

DENVER, Oct. 25, 2021 /PRNewswire/ -- For the past 18 months, companies have been heavily investing in the unified communications and collaboration (UC&C) tools that are necessary for remote work. Now, as remote and hybrid work environments become ubiquitous and technology continues to advance, many of these same companies are looking for new ways to provide reliable, fast, and secure collaboration solutions that maximize their existing UC&C investments.

To help businesses upgrade to the latest advanced collaboration solutions, Lumen Technologies (NYSE: LUMN) and Cisco (NASDAQ: CSCO) today announced they have expanded their partnership to include a new offering: Lumen Solutions for Cisco Unified Communications Manager Cloud \(UCMC\). This new product pairs Cisco's most advanced, cloud-based collaboration services with the reliability and speed of Lumen's global fiber network, which makes it an ideal solution for businesses that have already invested in Cisco Webex, or those that are considering it.

"Because of the pandemic, enterprises all around the world have realized that the future of work includes remote and hybrid environments, so they are investing heavily in cloud solutions that integrate calling, conferencing, file sharing, and software applications," said Scott Velting, Lumen vice president of product management, voice and collaboration solutions. "Our expanded partnership with Cisco will enable current and future users of Cisco Webex to deploy flexible, agile, and efficient collaboration technologies without large capital investments, ongoing maintenance, or high IT expenses for staffing and training."
